

A last gift to you from Lewis

A few years ago, Lewis was invited to a dinner party where he knew everyone, but none of the other guests had ever met before.

At the dinner table the wine glasses had been joined together with a big elastic band.

When he asked the hostess why she had done this, she said "That elastic is you, Lewis. You join us all together."

As Lewis reflected on his life and his work over the last few months, it seemed to him that his hostess had been very insightful, and he asked that all who attend his memorial service be given an elastic band in his memory.

Lewis spent his whole life finding flexible ways to connect people, drawing them into mutually beneficial relationships.

So, please take one of these bands and keep it. Whenever you see it, remember Lewis, and remember that you can continue his life work if you can connect people, because People Matter.
